A crash as of thunder fell upon the ears of the startled people living in the vicinity of 8 West Twenty-eighth street, at about 10.30 this morning. So heavy was the shock that all the buildings were shaken and the occupants looked apprehensively at the walls and

The noise was located as coming from the rear of No. 8, and people whose windows commanded a view in that direction soon saw the cause of the crash. The roof of the building at the rear and all of the walls in-cluded in the two upper stories had fallen and lay in a miscellaneous heap on the shak-ing remnants of the structure.

In this ruin human beings, no one knew how many, were involved, for a dozen workmen had been there when the fall took place. The building, No. 8, was, until lately, occupied by a restaurant, the well-known Morelli's, and the superstitious will recall, as confirming their belief in omens, that it was the former scene of the banquets of the Thirteen Club.

Lately the structure was vacated, and it was Lately the structure was vacated, and it was being demolished to make way for a new building. The front had been taken out, partition walls removed from the interior, and the building was a mere shell, its heavy roof resting upon walls which were hourly being weakened.

This morning the workmen were employed chiefly at the rear, where a portion of the structure was separated by a brick wall from that fronting the street. At this point the accident occurred.

The Commissioners Would Have Exonerated Him.

They Found His Language to Lawyer Rhedes Was Grossly Improper, but the Charges of Extortion Were Not Pushed-The Commissioners Accept His Resignation-The Inquest in the Pittman Case.

Warden Thomas P. Waish, of the Tombs, has sent his resignation to the Commissioners of Charities and Correction, who have accepted it. To-day they sent a communication to this effect to the Mayor. They acquit him on the charge of attempting to extort illegal fees from Lawyer Rhodes, but say that his language to Mr. Rhodes was grossly improper and not to be tolerated.

The whisper that the redoubtable Fatty Walsh had resigned his position as Warden of the Tombs caused great excitement in the neighborhood of the City Prison this morn-

It was not generally believed until the Warden plumply admitted its truth to sev eral reporters. He said :

"I have written a communication resign ing my position as Warden of the Tombs and handed it to my counsel, E. Ellery Anderson. It has not yet been sent to the Commissioners, but just as soon as this investigation is over it will go in. I do not propose to resign under fire. " I am tired of the place and the incessar

"I am tired of the place and the incessant worry I am put to. The position is not worth the trouble."

Coroner Eidman began an inquiry to-day into the suicide of Francis W. Pittman, the murderer, in the Tombs. George W. Burke, who is suspected of having given Pittman the poison, was taken to the courtroom by Detective Mulholland.

Dr. George N. Swinburne, of Chambers Street Hospital, described the efforts to counteract the effects of the poison.

Deputy Sheriff Curran testified that Pittman was removed handcuffed from the General Sessions court-room to the Tombs; that he was searched, and that it was impossible for any one to have handed poison to him before reaching the Tombs.

Dr. John Duncan McKim, the ambulance surgeon, testified that as soon as he saw Pittman's condition, at 7.50, he asked permission to remove the sick man to the hospital. Warden Walsh refused the permission, saying that Pittman was a life prisoner and could not be removed.

"In my opinion the delay of forty-five minutes in removing Pittman to the hospital had a serious effect on the question of preserving his life," said Dr. McKim, in reply to a juror's question.

[SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.]

NORTH HUDSON DRIVING PARK, GUTTENsuno, N. J., April 12.—This is another uncomfortable day for the followers of the races at the track " over the hill." It was raining when the early birds arrived, which started them singing "Rain, rain, go away, and come again a Clifton day." For rain Clifton is not the nuisance it is here. At Clifton, visitors can get out of the cars almost directly into the stand and betting ring. To come here one has a journey of almost three miles from the ferry. with the transportation getting worse every day. In fact the vehicles are almost as disreputable in appearance as Falstaff's army was, while the conveniences at the track are of the most primitive or-The track to-day is deep in mud, and although it was not raining when the racing began it was cold and raw. The first race was for maidens, at five furlongs, which the starter in a measure gave to Fountain, who led from start to finish. The econd was a race at 105 pounds, without allowances of any kind, for which Gulnare was the favorite and winner.

The rain fell quite heavy while the hor were at the post for the third race, which, however, was all in favor of the favorite, Rebellion, he winning easily. The rain ceased before the fourth race for which Veto was a big favorite. He finished third, a head behind Gold Star, who was beaten a head by Chinchilla. The fifth race was won by Trueborn.
